1. Standard Plain English Consent Script (In-Person Consultations)

To be read aloud by the adviser before starting any recording:

"Before we begin, I would like to ask if you are happy for us to record the audio of our conversation today.

We use a secure computer tool called Case Ace to help me write up our case notes. This means I can focus completely on listening to you and giving you advice, rather than looking down at my keyboard to type.

Here is how we protect your privacy:

Your names, date of birth, address, and National Insurance number are automatically muted and removed right here on this computer before any notes are created.

The recording is completely deleted as soon as our session finishes.

The audio is never shared with the DWP, the council, the Home Office, or anyone else.

You do not have to agree to this. If you say no, I will write our notes by hand or type them myself, and your advice, appointment time, and service will be exactly the same.

Are you happy for me to turn on the recording?"

You can also tell us to STOP at any time.

- [] NO, please write notes by hand.

3. Telephone Consent Script (Cisco Webex Calls)

To be spoken naturally at the start of telephone consultations:

"Hello, my name is [Adviser Name] from Citizens Advice Wandsworth.

Before we start, I'd like to ask if you agree to me recording the audio of our phone call today using our secure note-writing assistant.

The tool mutes all your personal details like your name and postcode so they stay private, and the recording is permanently deleted as soon as we finish our call.

You don't have to agree—if you'd rather I didn't record, I will write your notes by hand, and your advice will be exactly the same.

Are you happy for me to record the call for note writing?"
